RESEARCH AND OUTREACH

My research initially focused on cultural and social issues in the colonial history of Greenland in the 19th century. More recently I have been working with the 20th century and the archival documentation of postwar period administration of Greenland as well as issues related to archival practices and shared archival heritage in post-colonial contexts. In recent years I have co-authored several publications with an interdisciplinary research scope and have a strong preference for working in interdisciplinary teams. In recent years, I have been engaged in the dissemination of archives and archival research through a broad range of projects including online databases of retro-digitized archives, podcast productions, exhibitions and SoMe content as part of the development of a digital dissemination strategy at the Greenland National Museum and Archives.
